In The Good Old Summer Time

As I am preparing this presentation, it is June 21st which is designated as the first day of summer. In reference to the title above, it is helpful to use the time frame to look at our behavior in regard to Memorial Day in May, Labor Day in September, and Independence Day in July.

With these popular observances centered in the midst of vacation plans, it is to have leisure experiences to be sought and enjoyed. Yet a more serious reflection reminds us not to neglect to have us as a nation to pause to permit a rewarding sense of citizenship to be expressed in actions as well as in words.

Each of these dates lends themselves to have a meaningful celebration: Memorial Day in recognition of the extreme sacrifices our military have produced; the Fourth brings focus on the gift and price of liberty; and Labor Day spotlights the dignity and contribution of work.

But to leave such well intentioned pursuits to flow from human incentives void of a spiritual component, will permit even legitimate recreation to down play the true meaning of these annual brief pauses marked on our nation's calendar.

Fortunately, our holy faith gives us adequate insight to whom to go and from whom to receive proper understanding when we should not be satisfied with superficial human response. Saint Peter is a good example of how at times he could be off the mark with sudden bursts of fervor whereas when very serious responses were called for, he was commended for the correct answers. Such are those meaningful faith filled words of his: "You are the Christ the Son of the living God" or "Master, to whom shall we go? You have the words of eternal live."

Even in the good old summertime 'there are present ordinary moments suggesting it is good for us to be here' in communion with our loving God.
